The Altus Color Guard from Altus Air Force Base prepare for opening ceremonies last Friday night at Foss Christmas in July.

Clinton Home Run derby and 100 inning game

Chase Wright
Staff Writer

The 5th annual, 100-inning softball game and Home Run Derby hosted by Clinton High School Softball will have a very special turnout on Saturday, July 25th. Due to the nationwide school closures, Spring sports were canceled, and high school athletes had to give up their seasons. For seniors, losing out on their last year of playing was a pretty big heartbreak. So, this year's 100-inning game and derby are inviting any alumni to grab their gear and play alongside the 2020 Lady Reds softball team. And, as a big thank-you to the Senior class, there will be a special presentation for the 2019 Slow-Pitch seniors.

Don't miss the opportunity to enjoy some much-needed fun, and scratch that sport itch at the game on July 25th. The event is the softball team's main fundraiser of the year, and it provides support for many of the necessities of the season such as uniforms, equipment, meals, fees, and more.

2020 Clinton Rodeo Scheduled for July 17-18

Chase Wright
Staff Writer

Dust off your cowboy hat, wrestle your way into a pair of high rise boot-cut jeans, spit-shine that belt-buckle, and practice that slow southern drawl because the Clinton Rodeo is back again. The 2020 Rafter D Rodeo, hosted by the Clinton Round-Up Club, will be scratching at your country itch as they gear up for some competitive fun.

This year's rodeo will be a little different due to the restrictions, mandated by COVID-19 procedures, and as such, updates regarding events and money prizes will be released soon. There will be no mutton busting or calf riding this year, but they will continue to award the slickest jewelled buckles to the average winner. Prize money is set at a minimum of $500 and is on the rise towards their goal of $1000.

The rodeo starts at 9 PM on July 17th and will continue on July 18th. A ton of local guys and gals will be competing this year. They'll also be holding a Calf Scramble for the kids and a Ring of Fear alongside more traditional rodeo events.

The Queen Contest will begin on Thursday at 6 PM. Barbecue will be served and attendance is free to the public.

The Clinton Rodeo kicks-off the latter half of a year that has been one heck-of-a-ride.

Jay spent years doing mission work with Teen Challenge of Oklahoma and Assembly of God's Disability Ministries. At Teen Challenge he was nick named "the buffer," because he could calm any male who was out of control. He could sit for hours telling stories of funny things that happened to him during his adventures. However, his very favorite thing to do was to spend time with his 15-year-old twin daughters Alexis and Abigail Grace. He loved his daughters so much and would tell anyone that would listen all about them. Dick Carr, the rodeo legend

Kelly R. Kilhoffer
Oklahoma History Enthusiast

I have followed him into his workshop, a room adjacent to his house. It is filled with strands of twine, finished ropes and partially-finished ropes. The smell of leather tinges the air; it feels scared to me. Photographs of rodeo champions, posing with him are scattered about. They watch us as if they are the angels and saints of this small chapel. I see Lane Frost and find myself choking up. Dick Carr picks up a bottle, containing oil sent to him by a close friend. As he places it to his finger, he gently moves to the bull riding rig that he is currently crafting. He places the oil onto a small piece of hide and begins to offer a blessing.

Dick Carr is a rodeo legend. Not just because he was one of the early bull riders of the beginning days of the sport, but simply because of who he is and what he has done for rodeo and rodeo champions. There is an aura, or presence, to him. You either take to him and he to you or it just doesn't happen. He reads people rather well. At 86, Dick Carr is still very sharp and steady. If you're wondering why I use both names, well, there is something about him that requires it. It's sort of like saying John Wayne. You wouldn't call 'The Duke' just John.

Born to parents, Horace and Gladys Carr in 1932, he was raised on a farm north of Canute. The family moved closer to Beutler Brother's ranch between Hammon and Elk City. There Dick Carr discovered what would become his life's passion. At ten years old he knew, "I wanted to be a Cowboy, not just a cowboy but a bronc-riding, bucking rodeo cowboy." Not many of us are so lucky to know our path at such a young age.

Watching the cowboys and hired hands at the rodeo stock ranch set a fire burning in him. "I wanted to be a World Champion Bull Rider." His mother and father saw his conviction and never held him back, his mother taught him early on to pray. It was one of the most valuable gifts he ever received.

By age 17, Dick Carr started entering rodeos. His goal, at first, was simply to ride well enough to win a buckle like he had seen on some of the cowboys he admired. He rode broncs and bulls but soon focused solely on bull riding. It was in Prescott, Arizona that Dick Carr won his first buckle. "You either gave 100 percent to riding them suckers or you weren't," he said.

The cowboys who rode the rodeo circuit were a pretty close knit group in those days. "They took me in and took care of me." Guys like Harry Tompkins, World Champion and All-Around Cowboy, Jim Shoulders and Casey Tibbs, I knew 'em all," he tells me. It is quite a list and it grows to this day.

He admits he wasn't the best bull rider, but he managed to place well enough to go to New York's Madison Square Garden 6 times, Calgary once and went to Cheyenne, Wyoming's rodeo twice when Beutler Brother's provided the stock. "Elra Beutler was one of the main reasons I got into rodeo. He was a great man," he says. In those days, five riders might ride two bulls again and again. There was one time when 17 riders rode 70 head. That's a lot," he chuckled, boyishly. "The ground at Cheyenne was hard as this floor," as he points to the kitchen floor where we are sitting, "and they used a big oil pistol to signal you that it was time. Problem was, the gun often misfired and you might ride 12 seconds or more before they got a shot off."

The Five Love Languages of God

The Five Love Languages written by Gary Chapman, has been translated into twenty-five languages and read around the world. It was followed by The Five Love Languages for Children, The Five Love Languages for Teenagers and others. The one I will be referring to in this article is The Five Love Languages of God.

Jim Morrison

This is not to imply that God has different languages for different people, but that we receive God's message to us differently because we are unique in our backgrounds, personality, and receptivity. In essence, we are wired differently. In his book, The Five Languages of God, Chapman points out that each of us express our love for God in different ways. There are usually one or two ways that our make-up comes into play, allowing us to feel comfortable when we express our love for God. The five languages that Chapman referred to were: Words of affirmation, Quality time, Gifts, Acts of service, and Physical Touch.

Perhaps a personal example would be helpful. Most of the Praise choruses we sing in today's worship service are simply that: praise offered to God expressing how great he is and how much we adore him. This kind of worship is found throughout the Psalms so it is certainly Biblical. But I confess most of the time they don't do much for me. They are expressions of praise to God that cause many to raise their hands and face and sway to the music, sometimes with tears of emotion.

I am moved more by hymns of action and challenge—songs that want me to go out and do something to bring in the Kingdom. "I'll Fly Away" doesn't do much for me but "A Mighty Fortress is Our God," or "Set my Soul Afire, Lord," challenges me to acts of service or sharing Christ that Hillsong choruses don't. I may be weird or just too old to appreciate praise music but I choose to believe that it is a part of my makeup. I can better express my love for Jesus by setting across the table from an inmate who feels his life is over and sharing the good news of the hope we have in Christ.

As I have stated before, praise is wonderful and reminds us of the beauty and holiness of God but let's not confuse the issue to make that the ultimate or highest form of worship for all people. Some people would not dare read a Christian book but I find joy in seeing how God worked mightily in the lives of the past saints of God, or in learning how to pray more effectively by reading the experiences of others.

There is a joy in giving sacrificially. Paul said it caused the church in Jerusalem to erupt with many "expressions of thanks" and "praise to God for their obedience." II Cor. 9:13 No doubt their gifts caused people to glorify God which is our highest gift. So for some it may be "Quality time," for others, "Gifts," for some "Words of affirmation" or for others "Acts of Service." Granted, we need to be involved in all of these to some degree but for each of us one or two may be the primary way or ways that we love God. To Him be the glory.

SWOSU's Wiggen Elected Officer of National Organization

Dr. Todd Wiggen, coordinator of the Reach Higher Flex Finish program at Southwestern Oklahoma State University in Weatherford, was recently elected to a two-year term as secretary for the Association of Leadership Educators (ALE).

Wiggen will serve until July 2022 in the position. The ALE was formed in 1990 as the premier international professional association for leadership educators. The association serves as a resource for the exchange and development of quality ideas, scholarship and practice that impacts the field of leadership education.

Wiggen is an assistant professor in the Everett Dobson

Dr. Todd Wiggen

School of Business and Technology at SWOSU and serves as the coordinator of the Organizational Leadership (Reach Higher) program. He is currently the four-year council chair for the State of Oklahoma's Reach Higher program, a degree-finishing program offering a Bachelor's degree in Organizational Leadership.

He also serves as editor-in-chief of the Administrative Issues Journal, based at SWOSU.

Prior to election to the ALE board, Wiggen served on the association's conference and awards committees, presented at the annual conference, and assisted ALE reviewing grant applications, conference proposals and article submissions for the Journal of Leadership Education.

Prior to joining the faculty at SWOSU, Wiggen served as an officer in the United States Coast Guard, retiring from active service in 2016.

He is married to Kate and his son, Joshua, will attend SWOSU in the fall.

Oklahoma history

Chase Wright
Staff Writer

On July 15th, 1975, Oklahoma pilot and Astronaut Thomas Patten Stafford acted as commander of the Apollo-Soyuz Test Project mission. Mission prepping began in 1973, shortly after Stafford's promotion to the rank of Brigadier General at the end of 1972. The mission, dubbed ASTP, was a joint operation between American astronauts and Soviet Cosmonauts, the first international space mission. A milestone that millions of people around the world watched unfold as the U.S. Apollo docked with the Soviet Union Soyuz capsule. The success of the mission, and the famous handshake in space between the teams, is generally considered the cap on the end of the Space Race that began in 1957. A feat possible by the progress made between the superpowers and the teams performing the mission.

The United States 3-man team was comprised of Director of Flight Crew Operations Astronaut Donald K. "Deke" Slayton, Commander of ASTP Thomas P. Stafford, and Vance D. Brand. A rigorous training program had the team going back and forth between Russia and the United States.

The work paid off as the teams launched on July 15th, 1975. Soyuz 19, with crew members Alexei Leonov and Valery Kubasov, departed at 12:20 UTC, and the Apollo and crew departed at 19:50 UTC. After two days in space, they docked on July 17th.

The crews met and performed the "first major joint scientific experiment(s) in the history of mankind" – Leonid Brezhnev (Soviet leader). These experiments included an arranged eclipse of the Sun by the Apollo module that would allow the Soyuz crew to take photographs of the solar corona. The work done between the two units set a precedent for future American-Russian flights.

After docking for 44 hours, the two crafts undocked on July 19th. Soyuz returned on July 21st and Apollo returned on July 24th. During its decent, the Apollo command module began filling with nitrogen tetroxide, a common propellant for rockets. The crew quickly put on their oxygen masks but Brand lost consciousness. Stafford assisted him, and the crew safely landed and were recovered by the USS New Orleans. Upon recovery, the crew were taken to a hospital in Hawaii and treated for edema from the fuel inhalation. Both crews landed safely; ASTP was a success.

The mission was the first of its kind and the last of the dawning of the space age. The two teams used complex new designs, machines, and training to prove that the world is "big enough for everyone to live peacefully [and] too small to be threatened by nuclear war." USSR and the US recognized the mission as an act of peace and respect.

SWOSU Sayre Tuition & Fee Cuts to Assist Area Students

Southwestern Oklahoma State University is seeking to return its Sayre location to a community college tuition/fee structure effective this upcoming Fall 2020 semester.

Before the Sayre location joined SWOSU at Weatherford on July 1, 1987, it was a community college.

"This is an incredible opportunity for the residents of western Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle to enjoy the benefits of a premier regional university coupled with the price and personal attention of a community college," said SWOSU Sayre Dean Bill Swartwood. "We are excited about the opportunity."

The new tuition/fee schedule will only apply to face-to-face classes at Sayre.

"Our main goal is to encourage residents in these areas of Oklahoma and Texas to attend classes at Sayre," said SWOSU Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs Dr. James South. "We encourage students to seek an associate's degree, which can be completed at Sayre."

The tuition rate with mandatory fees would be $175 per hour, a savings of $73.75 per credit hour and nearly $1,106 per semester based on 15 hours. The price does not include Academic Enhancement Fees (AEF), which would be paid by the student.

South said Sayre remains an integral part of the SWOSU system that also offers bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees.

For additional information, contact Swartwood at bill.swartwood@swosu.edu or 580.928.5533 extension 2107.

McBride Named OEA Legislator of the Year

State Rep. Mark McBride, R-Moore, was recognized by the Oklahoma Education Association (OEA) with the Outstanding Legislator Award for 2020.

The organization, which represents teachers in working with state and local government agencies as well as with lawmakers and the governor, said it selected McBride because of his outstanding support of public education and public educators.

"I'm appreciative to be recognized for my legislative work to ensure Oklahoma public school students have the very best education possible," McBride said. "During this time of uncertainty and change, it is more important than ever that all education stakeholders come together to work for what is best for Oklahoma students. Making sure students have access to highly qualified teachers and up-to-date classroom materials and resources improves their academic success and prepares them to be productive members of society."

"We may have disagreements at times over our approaches," McBride said, "but at the end of the day if students receive the best education possible, it is worth it."
