Live music is returning to the amphitheater in McLain Rogers Park in Clinton this Friday night after a brief hiatus for Clinton High School's graduation ceremony, and the Levitt AMP Clinton Music Series guarantees to bring the best family-friendly entertainers Oklahoma has to offer.

Starting the night's performances off will be Scissortail Production's Stardust, a band comprised primarily of Oklahoma musicians affiliated with the production company coordinating the Levitt AMP Clinton Music Series. "We [Scissortail Productions] have a strong commitment to having at least 50% of the artists on this series be Oklahomans," said Scissortail Productions Artistic Director Susan Adams-Johnson, and they are definitely accomplishing that mission.

Headlining this week's performance, The Oklahoma Opry, which has been performing regularly since 1977, offers a one-of-a-kind musical experience that's heavily rooted in the musical culture and history of Oklahoma. The Oklahoma Opry, which also performed in last years Levitt AMP Clinton Music Series, draws on several musical genres and enlists the talents of some of Oklahoma's best live musicians and performers.

Along with the live music there will be prize drawings for guests at the event, along with food trucks and assorted vendors.

The event promises to be a fun night out for the whole family in a historic venue that is seeing new life breathed into it with the summer concert series.

Friday night's performance is scheduled to begin at 7:30pm and you can find more information about the event by searching Levitt AMP Clinton Music Series on Facebook or by visiting Scissortail Production's website at www.scissortailproductions.com.

HIGHER GROUND

Taking the Risk

Have you ever had a new idea and wondered if this is from God or is this a product of my ego-driven personality? I certainly have. None of us want to fall on our face or look foolish by suggesting something new or doing something out of the ordinary. There is no full-proof way of knowing the outcome of most new ideas. Sometimes you just have to step out on faith. That was what I did 15 years ago when I walked into the local newspaper office and visited with the editor. We didn't know each other so I was more than a little nervous when I proposed an idea. Would they let me write a weekly column beginning with suggestions on developing a healthy prayer life. Surprisingly, he agreed. But a few days later he had a heart attack and died. I too, had a minor attack and was in the hospital for a few days.

Back home I found I had to repeat the idea to a new editor. He also went along with the idea and now about 700 articles later I am still seeking to lead people to strive for the "Higher Ground." Two newspapers now publish the articles as well as it being sent to about 175 friends and BSU alumni.

New ideas or challenges can be difficult to receive. Chuck Swindoll in his book entitled Joseph, describes the scene when Joseph, the prime minister of Egypt, not yet known to be their brother has requested that the youngest son, Benjamin be brought back to Egypt before they would be able to buy any grain.

The old patriarch, Jacob responded with an absolute "No." He had lost his beloved son, Joseph, or so he thought, and he would not risk the lost of the younger son, Benjamin. Swindoll points out that our natural tendency, when presented with a new idea is to look at it negatively. When faced with unexpected changes our first thought is "no."

His second suggestion is that we tend to look at the new idea horizontally rather than vertically. That is, we begin to think from a secular or human point of view. We think first about what could go wrong. Why it wouldn't be a good idea? What are the negative things about this? Why would this not be a good thing?

Presumptions are offered that might or might not be true. That is horizontal thinking. God or the Holy Spirit is not involved in the decision. To think vertically is to consider what God might do through this new idea. Could it be possible that God wants to do something helpful through this idea, although it is not the way we have always done it. Also, to be considered is the source. Does this come from someone who has been given a chance to fully explain the possibilities. Is he a credible or reliable person, or is he continually coming up with new and outlandish ideas.

Jesus was continually doing the unexpected. He ate with sinners and tax collectors. He spoke with women alone. He spoke about praying for those who had persecuted you...forgiving 70 X 7.

Our journey of faith should never be casually accepting the norm, or fearing what might happen. We are called to be on a journey into the unknown but with the promise of the abiding presence of our powerful God.

That is not to say that we should not count the cost and be wise but let us consider what God might be up to and give Him a chance to show Himself strong.

Additionally, Sanders says the largest broadband infrastructure program will be awarded by the end of 2025 at $797 million. The Oklahoma Broadband Governing Board recently approved 142 ARPA state and local fiscal recovery fund grants totaling $374 million to expand broadband access in 57 Oklahoma counties. Authorities say mini bikes can and will be impounded at the owner's expense.

WEATHERFORD / LYLE ROAD - Weatherford Mayor Mike Brown says while Lyle Road is open to traffic, some work still needs to be done, mainly regarding sidewalks and driveways. Staff Writer

Shannon Lucid, born on January 14, 1943, in Shanghai, China, has lived a life marked by resilience and remarkable achievements. Her early years were spent in extraordinary circumstances. The daughter of missionaries, Lucid was born in a Japanese prison camp during World War II. Alongside her parents, aunts, uncle, and grandparents, she was held captive in the Chapei Civil Assembly Center. In 1944, Shannon and her parents made it back to the United States in a peaceful exchange of noncombatant citizens. After arriving, they waited out the war in the US before going back to China, but ultimately decided to leave again due to the Chinese Communist Revolution in 1949. Once they returned to America, they moved to Lubbock Texas, and finally, to Bethany, Oklahoma, where her family was originally from.

Lucid's educational journey began at Bethany, where she graduated in 1960. Her curiosity of the higher exploration began when she sold her bicycle to purchase a telescope to look at the stars. She immediately planned to become a space explorer and began building her own rockets. She then pursued higher education at Wheaton College in Illinois before transferring and earning a Bachelor of Science degree in Chemistry in 1963 at the University of Oklahoma. Her academic prowess continued with a Master of Science degree in 1970 and a Ph.D. in Biochemistry in 1973, both from the same institution. Lucid's early career saw her in various scientific and teaching roles, including a teaching assistant position at the University of Oklahoma and a senior laboratory technician at the Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation. She also worked as a chemist at Kerr-McGee and as a graduate assistant at the University of Oklahoma Health Science Center's Department of Biochemistry and Molecular Biology.

In January 1978, Lucid's life took a transformative turn when she was selected for NASA's astronaut candidate-training program. By August 1979, she had become an astronaut, setting the stage for a pioneering career in space exploration.

Lucid, a commercial, instrument, and multi-engine rated pilot, had dreamed of flying since her first airplane ride at the age of five. During her crew training, she got to work on developments of the Shuttle Avionics Integration Laboratory, the International Flight System from Rockwell, and the Hubble Space Telescope.

Lucid's first space mission was aboard STS-51G Discovery in June 1985. During this mission, she played a crucial role in deploying communications satellites for Mexico, the Arab League, and the United States. The crew also used the Remote Manipulator System to deploy and retrieve the SPARTAN satellite, which conducted x-ray astronomy experiments. The mission covered 2.5 million miles in 112 orbits of the Earth over 169 hours.

Her second mission, STS-34 Atlantis, took place in October 1989. Lucid helped deploy the Galileo spacecraft on its journey to explore Jupiter and conducted numerous secondary experiments, including those focused on radiation measurements and microgravity effects. This mission orbited the Earth 79 times, traveling 1.8 million miles in 119 hours.

Lucid's third mission, STS-43 Atlantis, in August 1991, involved deploying the fifth Tracking and Data Relay Satellite and conducting 32 physical, material, and life science experiments. The mission completed 142 orbits of the Earth, covering 3.7 million miles in 213 hours.

Her fourth spaceflight, STS-58 Columbia, in October 1993, set a new record for the longest shuttle mission at the time. This mission was a significant scientific endeavor, with the crew performing neurovestibular, cardiovascular, cardiopulmonary, metabolic, and musculoskeletal experiments on themselves and 48 rats. They also conducted 16 engineering tests and 20 Extended Duration Orbiter Medical Project experiments, making 225 orbits of the Earth and traveling 5.8 million miles in 336 hours.

Lucid's fifth and most notable mission was as part of the Mir-21 crew on the Russian Space Station Mir. After a year of training in Star City, Russia, she launched aboard STS-76 Atlantis in March 1996. Assigned as a Board Engineer 2, she conducted numerous life science and physical science experiments during her 188-day stay on Mir. This mission set a United States single mission space flight endurance record for a woman at the time. She traveled 75.2 million miles before returning to Kennedy Space Center aboard STS-79 Atlantis in September 1996.

In recognition of her extraordinary contributions, Lucid received several prestigious awards. In December 1996, she became the first woman to receive the Congressional Space Medal of Honor for her record-breaking service aboard Mir. Russian President Boris Yeltsin awarded her the Order of Friendship Medal, one of the highest Russian civilian honors, for her efforts during the mission.

Lucid continued to contribute to NASA in various capacities. In 1998, she had a short cameo in the blockbuster film Armageddon. Then, from February 2002 until September 2003, she served as NASA's Chief Scientist, responsible for developing and communicating the agency's science and research objectives. She then returned to her duties at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, including acting as CapCom for STS-114 Discovery in 2005. In 2012, she retired from NASA and wrote about her experiences on the space station Mir in Tumbleweed: Six Months Living on Mir which was published in 2020.

She was inducted into the International Space Hall of Fame in 1990, the Oklahoma Women's Hall of Fame in 1993, The National Women's Hall of Fame in 1998, and the United States Hall of Fame in 2014.

Shannon Lucid's career stands as a testament to her dedication, pioneering spirit, and significant contributions to space exploration. Her journey from a Japanese prison camp to the vast expanse of space is a remarkable story of resilience, determination, and achievement.

Tornadoes Touch Down in Custer County, Total Damages Unknown

Severe weather once again hit Western Oklahoma this past weekend. Pictured above is a home with a partially torn off roof, sustained during last Sunday night's Tornado outbreaks. This home, located just outside of Custer City, was one of several buildings damaged in Custer County.

A tornado was reported to have touched down west of Custer City, OK, at around 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, May 20, with up to nine more following it. The tornadoes were believed to reach wind speeds of 130 mph, according to News 9 coverage.

Residents living throughout many western Oklahoma counties were all told to seek shelter throughout the evening from both the tornadoes and the tennis ball-sized hail that accompanied them.

While investigations are still ongoing, an estimated 25 to 30 homes are believed to have been damaged throughout western Oklahoma. Among the most noteworthy cases were found in Custer County.

Custer City and Hydro saw up to 15 homes damaged, according to Custer County Emergency Management. One home's destruction resulted in two Hydro residents being hospitalized.

Rader Park in Weatherford was under siege at around 9 p.m. Tree limbs were the most significant signs of damage. Additionally, a semi truck was reportedly turned over by I-40's exit 88 near Hydro at 9:15 p.m.

Presently, no deaths have been reported in Western Oklahoma. The same is true for the OKC Metro Area, which was hit shortly afterwards.

Anyone who needs to report tornado or storm damage can do so online at www.damage.ok.gov.
